Columbia Journalism School Names Newsmen a Lecturer

The appointment of Donald R. Shanor, a correspondent for United Press International, as a lecturer and acting director of the international division of the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, was announced yesterday.

Mr. Shanor, a 38-year-old native of Ann Arbor, Mich., has been with UPI for 11 years. He has been a cable editor and staff correspondent in London, Frankfurt and at the United Nations. He has taught part-time at Columbia since 1962. He will head the international division for the 1965-66 academic year.
